

Getting the Word Out

A Record of Knowledge Mobilization in the Civil Justice System and the Public

The Civil Justice System and the Public is a collaborative action research project. As such the knowledge mobilization and sharing activities extend far beyond publications and formal presentations about “results.” Our knowledge mobilization began with getting the word out about the project to key contacts in the justice community, and then again to representatives of those organizations in our research sites across Canada. Activities by letter, email, telephone, in-person meetings and informal presentations have continued throughout the project and are far too numerous to list. Descriptions of and links to our print publications are provided on our website at <http://www.cfcj-fcjc.org/publications>. Getting the Word Out is a record of knowledge mobilization that attempts to capture a sense of our knowledge sharing activities throughout the project. We include articles in justice community, academic and mass media that inform about the research project as well as about our findings. As we learn about them, we have begun to add citations about the Civil Justice System and the Public.
