The Global Justice Gap is a Complicated Problem To Solve.

Why Does This Matter?

Return on Investment in Access to Justice

...and those are just a few examples!

The consequences of having a legal problem are especially hard-hitting for low-income people. This is a problem.

Spending cuts are common in the justice sector. They are often done as a way to save money that is then reallocated to other sectors and programs. In many cases, they are done at the expense of the most vulnerable people.

The benefits of spending on justice far outweigh the cost of the investment.

Let’s take a closer look at the Finance gap.

Spending cuts are necessary to the justice sector. They are often done as a way to save money that is then reallocated to other sectors and programs. The consequences of having a legal problem are especially hard-hitting for low-income people. This is a problem.

Generating approximate benefits that come from investing in justice spending, costs and benefits of providing civil legal aid for different countries to try to make it easier to resolve legal problems.

The report is available at www.cfcj-fcjc.org CFCJ for the Task Force on Justice.

The report is available at www.cfcj-fcjc.org CFCJ for the Task Force on Justice.